ALBUQUERQUE NATIVE AMERICAN ART

Particularly, at the Indian Pueblo Cultural Center in nearby Albuquerque, I learned about the Pueblo culture in its permanent exhibit called “We Are of This Place: The Pueblo Story.” Sitting on the footprint of the former Albuquerque Indian School, the Center’s museum houses more than 4,000 artifacts and works of art, both ancient and contemporary, illustrating Puebloan history and culture.

Also, in the Indian Pueblo Store, you can shop for art by internationally renowned artists. And every weekend, Indian dancers from the Pueblos interpret their way of life through dance in the place.

In addition, the Indian Pueblo Kitchen offers authentic Indigenous cuisine Tuesday-Sunday from 9 to 4. Hence, it’s the perfect starting point on my journey of discovering Native American Art.
